David Lawrence Says:

President and Senate in Controversy Over Appointments of Members of Allied Funding Commission—Eligibility Is Questioned—Legal Opinions Galore Quoted.

Messrs. Smoot and Burton ineligible while Senator Cummins of Iowa and Sterling of South Dakota, both Republicans, took the other view.

Not New Question.

This is not a new question. It came during McKinley's administration when Senator Hoar, Republican, argued that Mr. McKinley was wrong in appointing members of the senate to negotiate a treaty. It was believed that the time that the occasion was a special one and that it would not become a precedent. But instead the McKinley action has been taken as justification for the appointment of Senators Lodge and Underwood to the executive commission which negotiated the treaties at the arms conference.

There was a dispute at the time as to whether Mr. Harding was violating the constitution, but it was insisted that since the members of the commission did not receive confirmation by the senate and did not receive any pay they hardly could be called ambassadors. They occupied the status of senatorial advisors by virtue of the fact that the advice of the senate was considered by Mr. Harding as a treaty-making function.

Now, however, the desire of Mr. Harding still further to please congress by giving the legislative branch of the government a voice in the negotiations whereby payments on the allied war debt, interest and principal are to be arranged has developed an unforeseen conflict of opinion. It is devoid of party or personal feeling, however, and revolves entirely upon the question of whether the American constitutional system will permit close cooperation between the executive and legislative or whether an absolute separation was intended by the fathers of the republic. It is not unrelated either to the discussion which has been developing ever since the war that the executive should be more closely responsible to the electorate during his term.

Surrounding by Congress. The objection to the appointment of senators and representatives on commissions which are directly managed by the President of the

CAN SEND FOOD TO RUSSIA, RED CROSS ADVISES

Many Inquiries Received at Banks and Service Stations—Approve Shipments.

Reply to the inquiries received at local banks and at the Rock Island chapter of the American Red Cross as to the method for forwarding food to relatives and friends in Russia has been received from the Red Cross in Washington.

Inquiries have been received continually as to what assurance the sender has that his remittances reach their destination. The Red Cross in its communication to Mrs. J. L. Vance, local office secretary, stated that it will send applications here which should be properly filled out by the sender. The food is sent through the American relief administration in Russia.

The administration has warehouses established in Russia at the following stations: Petrograd, Moscow, Kazan, Ufa, Simbirsk, Orenburg, Saratov, Tzaritzin, Minsk, Samara, Odessa, Kiev, Ekaterinburg, Mogilev, Vitebsk and Gomel.

By food remittances is meant that the administration accepts dollar payments for delivery of staple American food to designated individuals or groups in Russia. These remittances may be obtained from the American relief administration, Russian department, Room 527, 42 Broadway, New York city, and should be filled carefully and sent to the above address accompanied by certified check, New York draft, postal money order, or American Express money order, the minimum sum accepted being $10. Money is accepted in $10 units to the maximum of $50.

The administration sends a notice to its headquarters in Moscow, Russia, and it in turn notifies the

TAXICAB DRIVER FINED; VIOLATES CITY RATES LAW

Frank Valandingham, driver for the Checker Taxicab company, was fined $10 and costs, totalling $16.40, on a charge of overcharging a passenger, by Magistrate D. J. Cleland in police court this morning.

The complaint was filed by H. J. Murphy, traveling salesman, who rode with Valandingham last night from the Thirty-first street station to the New Harper and was charged $1. The car was painted yellow and Mr. Murphy complained to the Yellow cab company this morning.

None of that company's drivers was identified by him and a complaint was filed with the police. Valandingham was arrested. He had driven the one yellow car operated by the Checker Taxicab company, all other cars of the company being marked with the checker design. The police say that a number of complaints have been received of overcharging by drivers of this particular cab. Valandingham pleaded not guilty to the charge but as he was identified as the driver the fine was imposed.

A city ordinance sets a rate of 50 cents to be charged for carrying a passenger any distance up to one mile. The trip from the Rock Island Lines station to the New Harper is within this distance.
